9/11

Lanthano 9/14/2023

9/11 is probably the largest, most well know terrorist attack in the world. It was devastating, shocking, and deadly. It reminded Americans that we aren't immune to the rest of the world. It reminded us that there are things that can still happen.

But it united America.

THE OFFICIAL STORY

On September 11, 2001, 19 hijackers (with connections to al-Qaeda), led by Osama bin Laden, carried out a coordinated terrorist attack on the United States.

Four commercial airliners were seized mid-flight. And at 8:46am, American Airlines Flight 11, a Boeing 767-223ER, crashed into the North Tower of the World Trade Center in New York City. 17 minutes later, at 9:03am, United Airlines Flight 175, a Boeing 767–222, struck the South Tower.

Both towers quickly where engulfed in fire. The South Tower collapsed at 9:59am, and the North Tower collapsed 29 minutes later at 10:28am.

While this was occurring, American Airlines Flight 77 was hijacked and flown into the Pentagon at 9:37am, killing both passengers and military personnel inside the building.

A fourth plane, United Airlines Flight 93, was also hijacked and believed to be targeting Washington, D.C. (thought possibly to be targeting the White House or the Capitol). While passengers attempted to retake control of the aircraft, the plane crashed in a field near Shanksville, Pennsylvania at 10:03am.

In total, nearly 3,000 people died in the attacks, including civilians, firefighters, police officers, and airline passengers, making it the deadliest terrorist assault in history.

The investigation concluded that the attacks were planned and executed by al-Qaeda operatives trained in Afghanistan under Taliban protection. Their stated motives included opposition to US presence in Saudi Arabia, American support for Israel, and US foreign policy in the Middle East. In response, the United States launched the War on Terror, beginning with the invasion of Afghanistan in October 2001 to dismantle al-Qaeda and remove the Taliban from power.

This is the official story[A1]. Now let's examine it.

TOWER 7

What people aren't told is that another building collapsed too. It's called Tower 7.

Later on the afternoon of September 11th, World Trade Center 7 (a nearby 47-story office building) collapsed at 5:20pm.

The official story is that fires weakened the building and it collapsed due to heat stress. However, that wouldn't cause the building to fall straight down. It would likely collapse in portions, but that's not what we see.

While many people claim that conspiracy theorists are crazy, we're all just wondering how terrorists managed to knock down three buildings with two planes.

OCCUPANTS

Tower 7 was of massive importance. Here is a list of companies that occupied the building[B1].

- Salomon Smith Barney (Citigroup): occupied ~20 floors, anchor tenant
- SEC (Securities and Exchange Commission): floors 11–13
- IRS: floors 24–25
- Secret Service: floors 9–10
- CIA (secret office, later confirmed): exact floor not disclosed
- Department of Defense offices
- Insurance companies (including Standard Chartered Bank)

SEC was currently investigating thousands of cases involving financial fraud. After the tower collapsed, many cases were dropped due to the number of documents and proof that were lost (see SEC FRAUD on page 12)

DEMOLITION

One key feature has captivated conspiracy theorists and had them asking questions for years; why did the tower collapse?

The official answer is that debris from the North Tower (WTC 1) hit Tower 7 as it fell. Then fires raging inside Tower 7 weakened the building until it finally collapsed at 5:20pm[B3].

This doesn't explain why the entire building fell uniformly though. If a fire and debris had weakened the structure, it would have fallen in portions. But instead, it drops at once very suddenly. No warning given, no gradual weakening, no portion collapsing in advance, just sudden, complete destruction.

The video can be seen here: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Mamvq7LWqRU

From the videos online, you can see it had a free fall acceleration time of 2.5 seconds. Critics of Tower 7 claim that this is reason to consider the destruction of Tower 7 as deliberate[B4].

Defenders of the fire and debris case claim that it was just a sudden failure of interior supports.

A sudden failure of internal supports is undeniably what happened. But demolition theory makes more sense, due to the fact that a fire would weaken the interior unevenly and cause an irregular collapse of the building. Not the even collapse we see in the footage.

BEFORE-HAND REPORTING

On September 11th, 2001, at 5:20:52pm Eastern Time, World Trade Center Building 7 collapsed. Remember that time, because multiple news outlets reported that the tower had already collapsed before it actually came down[B5].

But before that, at approximately 4:11pm, CNN anchor Aaron Brown reported that Building 7 "is on fire and has either collapsed or is collapsing." This was approximately 1 hour and 10 minutes before the building actually collapsed. The CNN broadcast also displayed a caption reading, "Building 7 at World Trade Ctr. on fire, may collapse."

At 4:27pm, Greg Barrow, reporting for BBC Radio Five Live, said that local media were reporting another building was in danger of collapse. He added, "I'm not sure if it has yet collapsed."

However, at 4:53pm, BBC Radio Five Live presenter Fi Glover summarized the earlier report by saying, "Twenty-five minutes ago we had reports from Greg Barrow that another large building has collapsed just over an hour ago."

At 4:54pm, Gavin Esler, reporting for BBC News 24, stated:

> We're now being told that yet another enormous building has collapsed... it is the 47-storey Salomon Brothers building.

Then, at 4:57pm, Phil Hayton, reporting for BBC World, announced:

> We've got some news just coming in actually that the Salomon Brothers building in NY right in the heart of Manhattan has also collapsed.

You can watch the BBC World report here: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=j1zlmUlRav0

In total, the outlets and broadcast services commonly cited in connection with these premature reports are:

1. CNN
2. BBC Radio Five Live
3. BBC News 24
4. BBC World
5. WCBS-TV (alleged; the reported announcement approximately 30 seconds before the collapse has not been independently verified with a reliable original transcript).

The timing is worth paying attention to. CNN's report came approximately 1 hour and 10 minutes before the actual collapse. The BBC Radio Five Live presenter repeated the erroneous collapse claim approximately 28 minutes beforehand, while BBC News 24 and BBC World reported that the building had collapsed approximately 27 and 24 minutes beforehand, respectively.

So, before Building 7 actually came down at 5:20pm, multiple news broadcasts had already announced or repeated reports that it had collapsed. The exact wording and timing differed between outlets, but the premature reports themselves are documented.

This has lead many people to believe that there was premature knowledge of the Towers collapse before hand.

TWIN TOWERS

Many see the collapse of the Twin Towers to have been a staged event. And while there is much evidence of an insider job, the actual collapse of the towers seems to be rooted in the physical world. That is, it makes sense.

TOP-DOWN COLLAPSE

The idea that the Twin Towers collapsed from the bottom is a widespread idea. Many believe the Twin Towers to have gave way at the bottom and the tops to have come crashing down. But, a close examination of the video footage shows that this is not the case.

The North Tower (WTC 1) was the first tower to come down. Even though it was hit after the South Tower, it sustained a lower impact and thus had a much higher load to carry with so many more floors above the impact site.

Due to the fact that the towers had very uniform windows going up the entire length of each tower, it becomes very difficult to judge which part of the tower is actually moving down. Many people believe that the entire upper portion of the towers were collapsing down on the base at the ground, but there are videos that show that it is actually the portions above the plane impact sites, that is crashing down through the rest of the tower toward the ground.

In these videos, you can see that the floors under the impact site remain stationary as the floors above that crash down through the building.

WTC 1 North Tower: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sYzIja6mlRs; https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MxJJLTkXiRs

WTC 2 South Tower: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ULdiD6gYZO0

There are also videos at the base of the North tower at the moment of its collapse, and you can see that no visible destruction or smoke until the tops of the towers crash to the ground: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oCPVNLLo-mI

As these videos show, the towers did not collapse from the bottom. It was indeed at the site of impact that the towers' strength gave way (whether due to the planes or not).

DETONATION

A well know, popular theory is that the Twin Towers didn't fall because of the planes that hit them, but because there were bombs set at the base of the structure. While this argument can be disproven just be looking at the footage of the buildings collapsing from the top down, some argue that the bombs were higher up.

This hinges on the thought that the mere planes where not enough to collapse the skyscrapers alone.

But if you examine the way in which these structures where built, you can see that the planes were definitely capable of taking the towers down.

PENTAGON

On 9/11, along with the two jets that hit the Twin Towers, a third plane (a Boeing 757-200) was hijacked by 29 year old Hani Hanjour, and crashed into the US Pentagon.

It is believed that American Airlines Flight 77 was hijacked at around 31 minutes after takeoff, at 8:51am. It crashed into the Pentagon on the western side at 9:37am.

There are multiple inconsistencies surrounding this event. Tragic as it is, the official story doesn't make sense for multiple reasons.

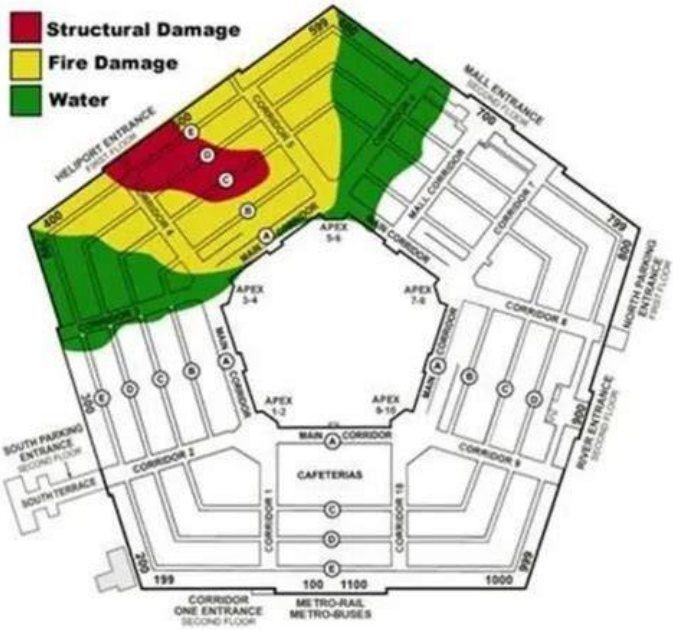

IMPACT HOLE

The initial hole that was left in the west side of the Pentagon, from the supposed plane impact, was allegedly around 65 to 80 feet wide. Some more liberal estimates put the hole at up to 90 feet wide.

The damage extended more than 300 feet inside the Pentagon's walls.

We are told that the Boeing 757 was moving at around 530mph at the moment of impact. The main power of the impact was held in the jet's fuselage and jet engines. The engines were 21 feet from the center of the fuselage to each side. This means the wing tips extended around 41 feet beyond the engines on both sides of the aircraft.

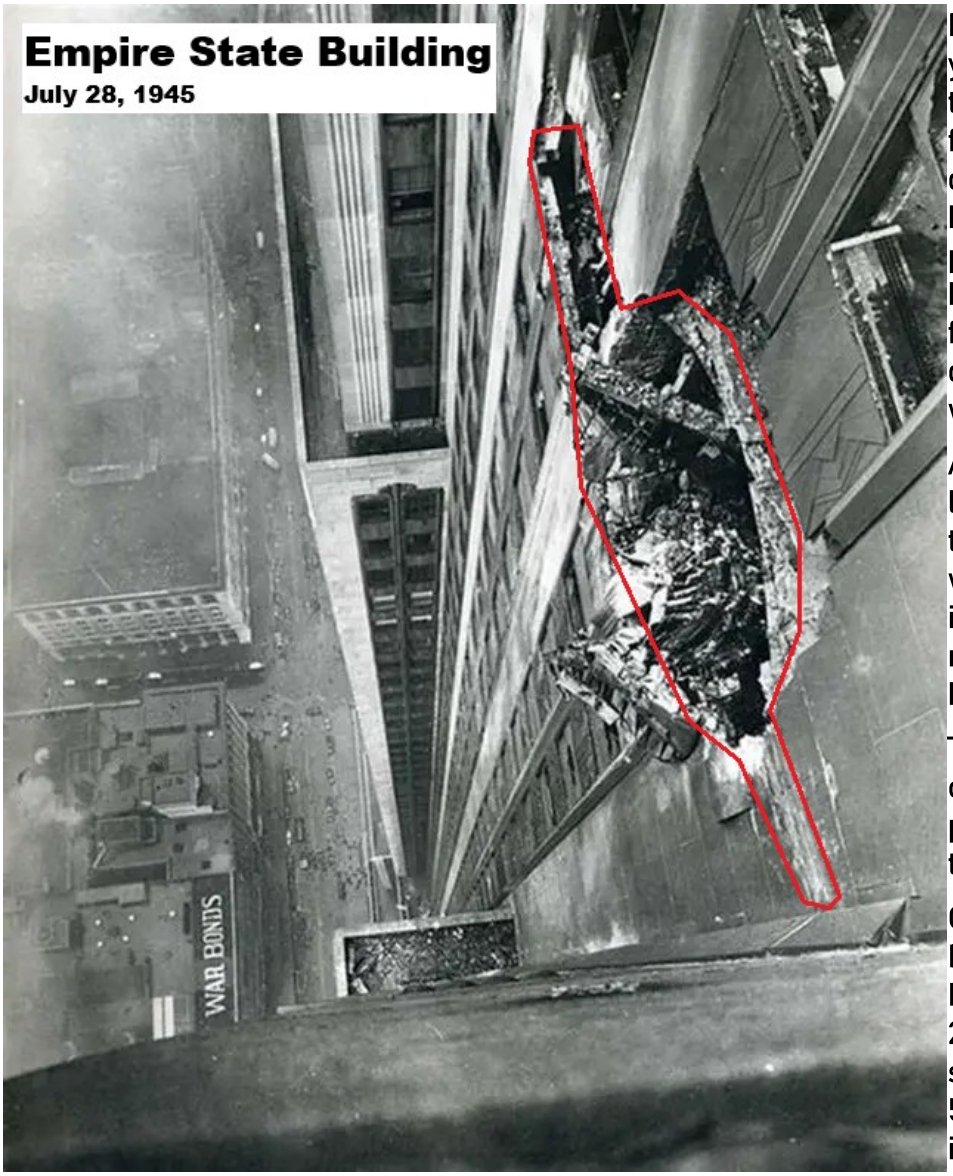

The entire Boeing 757 measured 124 feet from wing tip to tip, 155 feet from nose to tale, and 44 feet tall. This makes one wonder how a 124 foot wide jet leaves a 90 foot hole in something.

The Pentagon was incredibly reinforced. It was made to be blast resistant, and bullet proof. It had a five inch thick layer of limestone facing on the exterior. Past this was brick backing, and around 10 inches of rebar reinforced concrete. There was also a layer of woven ballistic Kevlar inside the wall to catch debris and help resist any possible bomb blasts[D1].

People argue that the Pentagon was strong enough that the lighter (mostly skin, frame, and fuel carrying) wing tips would be vaporized against the walls. But even if this were the case, you would expect to see clear signs of impact from the wings. Whether that be a spot that's burnt, cracked, clean from the force of the impact.

Around the world planes hit concrete towers and buildings, and the wings all leave visible damage on concrete or brick walls. Most of them leave holes in the structure, and actually make huge holes in the building. It's only when looking at smaller aircraft crashes, that you see wings not penetrating the outer walls. But still, they still leave clear, visible, imprints on the concrete or brick face.

For example, to the left, you can see a picture of the Empire State building from July 28, 1945. On that day, a B-25 Mitchell bomber (twin-engine prop plane) hit the skyscraper between the 78th and 80th floors. 14 people died that day, but the skyscraper was fine.

And from the image to the left, you can clearly see that, even thought the wings did disintegrate on impact, they left clear marks on the limestone, brick, and steel walls[D2].

The B-25 Mitchell bomber only weighed about 30,000 pounds at impact. It was traveling at only 230mph.

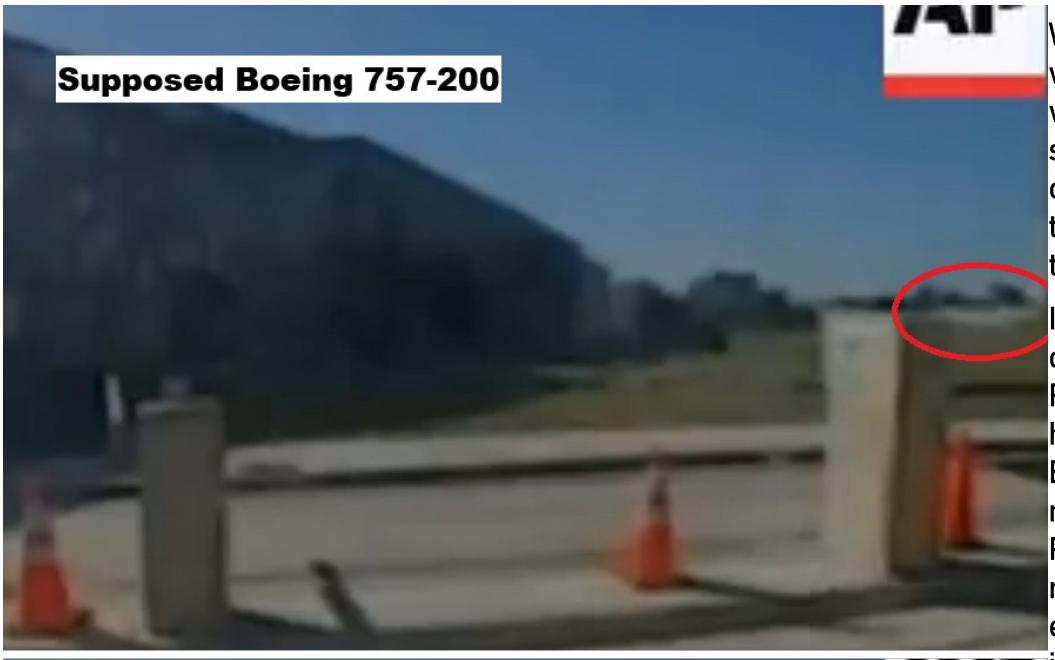

Compare that to the Boeing 757 that hit the Pentagon, it weighed 250,000 pounds and was supposed to be moving at 530mph at the moment of impact.

The Boeing 757 would be carrying 45 times more kinetic energy than the B-25 Mitchell bomber. And still, the bomber left marks on limestone and brick, and the Boeing 757's wings didn't leave any marks on the Pentagon?

SECURITY FOOTAGE

You can watch the security footage from the Pentagon here:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0SL2PzzOiF8

As you can see from watching the video, the only frame that shows the aircraft is this frame here. Here, your supposedly seeing the Boeing 757 right before it hits the Pentagon's westward wall. That white blur is all the proof of the object we have.

When this footage was released, it was said that it should put all conspiracy theories to rest and finalize the story.

It was stressed over and over that Flight 77 was hijacked and the Boeing 757 was rammed into the Pentagon. But when reviewing this extremely important security footage, the conspiracy theories remain alive and well.

The footage is inconclusive, and all we see is a white blur for the supposed plane.

The Boeing 757 in question was a mostly metallic silver with a red-white-blue stripe and the big AA eagle logo on the tail. So from the footage, it could be the plane. But this footage in no way puts conspiracies down.

The fact that this is the only video we got of the plane strike is in itself suspicious. The Pentagon had more than 85 cameras around the building, highways, and hotels nearby. But they only released this footage of the impact.

330 SPIRAL DIVE

At around 7,000 feet, near the outskirts of Washington, the Boeing 757 executed a descending right-hand 330 degree turn. The turn radius was about 1–2 miles, with the descent bringing the plane from several thousand feet down to just above ground level. This maneuver only took two and a half minutes, and during that time the jet supposedly accelerated to 530mph[D3].

Moving at 530mph, the jet would have been well above its handling speed. At that kind of speed, the aircraft would have been sluggish in pitch, responsive in roll, and harder to trim. It would be much harder, but the plane would still be controllable.

During the roll and turn, the aircraft banked to about 35 or 40 degrees, that 1.2 to 1.3 G of force on the aircraft and crew. Might not be fun, but it's well within the limits for the aircraft.

The maneuvers that the Boeing 757 supposedly pulled off were difficult, but within the aircraft's capabilities. The jet managed to hit the first floor of the Pentagon. That gives an error margin of mere feet.

In order to hit the first floor, the jet would be flying so low it would be clipping light posts.

> "Flight 77's demise was an exceptionally high-speed, head-on, explosive collision with the reinforced masonry façade of an office building — a type of impact not seen in commercial aviation."[D4]

This is were pilots are split. Some say that to hit the first floor, all one would need is force and that the maneuver was aggressive, ugly, and dangerous, but within limits.

Other pilots say that skimming in level at 500 knots that low is a stunt, not a normal maneuver.

Some pilots say that this was a stunt, performed by an expert or someone well trained. Some claim it had to have been a pre-programmed flight path. And others say it was just a forceful, aggressive, suicidal, Hani Hanjour.

Multiple sources claim that Hani Hanjour was a terrible pilot. Some claim that he shouldn't have a pilot license (see HANI HANJOUR on page 15).

MOTIVES

This is the part of the paper where people expect me to have donned my tinfoil hat and started recording crazy theories.

$2.3 TRILLION MISSING

On September 10, 2001, US Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld gave a speech at the Pentagon. He admitted that the Department of Defense (DoD) could not properly account for about $2.3 trillion in transactions due to serious problems in its financial systems[E1].

Many will point out that this didn't mean the money was literally gone. It just meant the Pentagon's accounting system were so outdated that auditors could not trace how all funds were being spent.

If this was the case, we would expect an investigation and the 2.3 trillion dollars to be found. And that's what started to happen. But conveniently, a plane crashed into the pentagon the next day. It literally crashed into the Pentagon's accounting and budget staff, killing multiple members[E2].

SEC FRAUD

SEC was dealing with pretty bad fraud at the time, and when 9/11 happened, it conveniently erased a lot of documentation.

When SEC's New York Regional Office (floors 11–13) were destroyed, the agency confirmed it lost files related to ~3,000–4,000 active cases. These included corporate fraud investigations involving: Enron (energy company, collapsed in December 2001 due to accounting fraud); WorldCom (telecom giant, revealed in 2002 as a massive accounting scandal); and numerous Wall Street insider trading, securities fraud, and accounting fraud cases[E3].

While many cases were rebuilt using digital backups and records from other offices, many prosecutions were delayed or dropped due to lost evidence.

Very convenient. Especially when this documentation was all lost in a tower that wasn't even hit by anything.

PRECOGNITION

Just because the planes hitting the towers was enough to knock them down, does not mean it wasn't an insider job. There are many pieces of evidence that indicates that America knew these attacks were coming long before they happened. And there's evidence that we helped it happen.

FOREIGN WARNINGS

Ahmad Shah Massoud, leader of the Northern Alliance in Afghanistan, told the European Parliament in April 2001 that al-Qaeda was planning a major attack on US soil. At least a dozen countries, including Israel, Germany, Russia, and Egypt, reportedly warned the U.S. about potential attacks by al-Qaeda in the summer months before 9/11[F1]. And there was even a US Presidential Daily Briefing on August 6, 2001 titled: "Bin Laden Determined to Strike in U.S."

So, with this we know that the warnings got through to the US President. But, what did the US do with this valuable, multi-country warning? Well, nothing. We let it happen, and there's even evidence that makes it appear as if we even helped it happen.

STOCK MARKET WITHDRAW

In the days before the attacks, there was a huge spike in "put options" (bets that stocks will drop) on United Airlines (UAL) and American Airlines (AMR). Those are the two airlines whose planes were hijacked during 9/11. Trading volumes were 600% higher than normal for UAL on September 6, and 1200% higher for AMR on September 10[F2].

Similar activity was seen with companies housed in the WTC towers, like Morgan Stanley and Merrill Lynch.

The 9/11 Commission Report looked into this stock market anomaly and it concluded the trades were innocuous. They argued that many were linked to hedging strategies by large investors, not insider knowledge.

However, Poteshman (University of Illinois) found statistical evidence that the activity was far beyond chance and likely represented informed trading.

Both the FBI and CIA looked for terrorist ties linked to the trades. They supposedly found no connection. However, documentation suggest there were links to investment banks with Middle Eastern connections.

The official view is that it all was explainable hedging, coincidence, or statistical flukes. Or in other words, because it's weird, they found idea that sticks and went with it.

TERRORIST INSURANCE

Tower 7, along with the Twin Towers, were owned by Silverstein Properties, led by Larry Silverstein. Six weeks before 9/11, on July 24th, 2001, Larry Silverstein took out a 99 year insurance policy for five of his towers (WTC towers 1, 2, 4, 5, and 7).

This insurance specifically covered terrorist attacks (which was standard thing to do at the time), and when the Twin Towers and tower 7 collapsed, he was given 4.55 billion dollars in payout[F3].

LARRY SILVERSTEIN

Larry Silverstein, involved in the management of Tower 7, usually was in the tower four to fives days a week. Monday thru Thursday or Friday. Normal.

And even though September 11th was a Tuesday, and Larry Silverstein was supposed to be in his office, he was not in the building on 9/11. He is claimed to have been meeting a doctor about a foot injury instead[F4]. Silverstein barely managing to escape death. And luckily, this allowed him to collect the 4.55 billion dollar payout for the insurance he had just taken out on his unlucky towers.

It is not possible to calculate how many days he had missed since July, but it is likely few due to the fact that it was considered odd when he didn't show up on the morning of September 11th.

WILLIAM COOPER

In June 2001, William Cooper (radio host, ex-Naval intelligence) said on his radio show that Osama bin Laden would be blamed for a supposed major attack on America. He warned it would be used to justify wars overseas and domestic crackdowns[F5].

Cooper explained that the attack would be used to justify foreign wars and domestic restrictions on freedoms in America.

And, as many who say such things do, on November 5, 2001, Cooper was killed. He was shot in a confrontation with sheriff's deputies at his home in Arizona. Law enforcement attempted to serve a warrant related to tax evasion and threatening officials. As a result, there was a shootout, and Cooper was shot and killed.

Just two months after his warnings were seen to be true, he was killed. This is suspicious to some, others may rolling their eyes and move on.

THE PILOTS

It didn't take long for pilots and names to come out for the 9/11 attacks. Here we will focus on the hijacker pilots of 9/11.

MOHAMED ATTA AND MARWAN AL-SHEHHI

Mohamed Atta (33 years old) was the pilot of the plane that hit WTC 1. He hijacked American Airlines Flight 11 and flew it into the North Tower at 8:46am.

Marwan al-Shehhi (23 years old) was the pilot that destroyed WTC 2. Hijacking United Airlines Flight 175 and flying it into the South Tower at 9:03am.

According to sources, these two were already flagged as suspicious persons. Some of their travel patterns (Afghanistan, UAE, Germany) were known to foreign intel agencies. Their suspicious flight school behavior (only interested in large jets, not landings, etc.) was reported to the FBI in mid-2001[G1]. But the FBI did nothing with this information.

HANI HANJOUR

Hani Hanjour (29 years old) is the man credited with flying a Boeing 757 into the Pentagon after performing a 330 degree spiral dive towards the Pentagon. For more on this stunt, go to 330 SPIRAL DIVE on page 11.

Although he is thought to be the hijacker pilot for Flight 77, many claimed that Hani Hanjour was a terrible pilot.

> In 2002, Jim Yardley (with the New York Times) described Hanjour's training performance, he said: "He [Hani Hanjour] could not fly at all."[G2]
> Peggy Chevrette (JetTech manager) on CBS News said: "I couldn't believe he had a commercial license of any kind with the skills that he had."[G3]

No source or person has ever spoken highly of Hanjour's piloting skills. Which is strange, because of the four hijacked planes, Hanjour pulled off the toughest maneuver to accomplish his goal.

THE PLANES

This section will focus on anomalies surrounding or to do with the planes of 9/11.

BLACK BOXES

American Airlines Flight 11 was a Boeing 767-223ER (North Tower), United Airlines Flight 175 was a Boeing 767–222 (South Tower). Each of these was carrying two black boxes. One recording flight data, the other recording cabin audio.

These things were nearly indestructible. If you don't believe me, I've pulled the specs on them for you to check yourself[H1].

Here's the specifications for the Honeywell HFR5-D Flight Data Recorder (FDR) that recorded flight data on the Boeing 767s:

- Recording Duration: 25 hours of flight data in solid-state memory.
- Compliance: ED-112/FAA TSO Standards for FDR

These are the specifications for Honeywell's HFR5-V Cockpit Voice Recorder (CVR). This is what would have recorded the last couple hours of audio inside the cockpits of the planes before they hit the Twin Towers:

- Recording Duration: 2 hours (maximum most recent)
- Compliance: ED-112/FAA TSO Standards for CVR

Here is the ED-112 regulatory standards (which both black boxes in each plane must have and claim to have adhered to):

- Impact Shock Test: must survive 3,400 G (1/2-sine pulse, 6.5 milliseconds).
- Static Crush Test: withstand 5,000 pounds (≈22.2 kN) for at least 5 minutes on each axis.
- Penetration Test: withstand impact from a 500 pounds of weight dropped 10 ft onto a 1/4-inch diameter steel pin placed on the unit.
- High-Temperature Fire Test: 2,012 °F for 60 minutes in a fuel-rich fire.
- Low-Temperature Fire Test: 500 °F for 10 hours.
- Fluid Immersion: survive immersion in aviation fluids (jet fuel, lubricants, fire extinguishing fluids).
- Deep Sea Pressure & Immersion: withstand seawater immersion at depths equivalent to 20,000 ft for 30 days (newer rules extend to 90 days with an underwater locator beacon).
- Magnetic Field, Vibration, Altitude, etc.: resist various operational/environmental stresses so they don't degrade in normal use.

Assuming near instant impact (giving one foot or less for impact distance), G force could be anywhere from 7,000 to 12,000 G. Due to black boxes actually being at the rear of the aircraft (giving well over 100 feet of impact distance), reality puts impact forces as low as 46 G, and possibly as high as 1,500 G. The average calculated G force being around 81 G to 123 G, well within the 3,400 G for testing regulations. The towers collapsing would not be anywhere near a dangerous G force for the boxes.

As the towers collapsed, a simple 10x10 foot, eight inch thick slab of concrete could easily flatten a black box completely. A piece of concrete this large would easily double the static tested weight limit of either the CVR or FDR.

Penetration testing doesn't look great either. With chunks of concrete well over static test limits, rebar could easily run through a black box completely. It only would take one piece of rebar sticking out of a 3x3 foot, 8 inch slab of broken concrete to impale either planes' black box.

Inside the Twin Towers, fires as hot as 1,800 °F burned for 56 minutes (South Tower), and 102 minutes (North Tower). This is not hotter than the 2,012 °F listed in testing, but the fire in the North building lasted longer than the regulations tested for. Fires well over 1,000 °F were recorded for months after burning inside the towers' rubble.

In the end, the survival of the aircraft black boxes is slim to none. Even surviving the initial impact, the skyscrapers' collapse make survival increasingly difficult for the boxes. The official story is that the black boxes to American Airlines Flight 11 and United Airlines Flight 175 were never found. Presumed destroyed and unusable.

MIRACLE PASSPORTS

Satam al-Suqami's passport was supposedly found a few blocks from the World Trade Center, on the street outside the North Tower[H2]. A passerby supposedly noticed the passport on the ground and gave it to a New York detective. The passport was supposedly found after both towers had been hit, but also before either had fallen.

Later, Mohamed Atta's passport was supposed to have been found in the debris of Flight 11 during the investigation of the plane's wreckage[H3]. Having survived the plane impact, subsequent fires, and the collapse of the tower.

I won't pull the specs for polyurethane-coated paperboard, but I'm sure you understand that the resistance heat is much lower than that of the black boxes on board the aircraft.

We're supposed to believe that the four black boxes on board the two aircraft were not capable of surviving the crash into the towers and the collapse afterward. But at the same time, you are also supposed to believe that two hijackers' passports survived?

I am not arguing that the black boxes should have survived the ordeal. In fact, it is very plausible that they actually didn't survive it at all. But, with this in mind, how in the world are we supposed to believe that Mohamed Atta's passport survived the plane's impact, subsequent fires, and the entire tower's collapse? And that Satam al-Suqami's passport happened to conveniently survive the crash of Flight 11 and land perfectly on the streets below for discovery. That's really convenient at best. And possible planting of evidence at worst.

“There are so many strange coincidences, anomalies, and unanswered questions about the events of 9/11 that the line between mismanagement and malfeasance often seems blurred.”

— David Ray Griffin, author of The New Pearl Harbor (2004)
